Medical

Travel in remote regions involves risk. We are outside the range of timely access to medical treatment and evacuation, even in cases of trauma. If you have questions, please call for additional information.

Participants should be in good physical health. We will be in remote regions for extended periods of time and transportation to medical facilities is often impossible. A recent medical examination and discussion with your doctor about the specific trip you are planning to join is recommended. We recommend that all participants undertake an appropriate physical conditioning program well in advance of the trip.

Mental preparation is also essential to your safety and enjoyment of the trip. Wilderness travel can be a fun, relaxing and awe-inspiring activity. But you may also be cold, wet, tired, sore, nervous, bug bitten and uncomfortable. A positive attitude and flexibility are important tools for coping with the travails of wilderness travel. Please be certain you are comfortable with the risks involved in wilderness travel before making this reservation.

Please provide us with a description of your physical condition and any additional information you think may be relevant. Check the box that best describes you.
